Fly Kitty! lands on the App Store

Paris, France

Sep 17, 2014

Wanpoint today is pleased to announce their first game: Fly Kitty! for the iPhone, iPad and iPod Touch.
Fly Kitty! is a free tap-to-flap game with unique features and style that make it stand out from the crowd.
Wanpoint is the new company of French game developer Erwan Bézier, whose previous game Survival Island : Developer's Cut was played over 9,000 times on Kongregate.

What makes Fly Kitty! so special ?

Unlike most of the games that share the same gameplay, irregular-shaped obstacles in full 3D require the player to think about perspective and to adapt the flight curve to the environment.

Players can use special hang-gliders to get additional lives which enhance the strategical aspect of the game. As lives only protect the player from balloons and not from trees, it adds another factor to the risk assessment.

Fly Kitty! is easy at first but gets more and more difficult as your score increases: with higher gaps and new obstacles. Also, it's not an endless game but only the best players will be able to trigger the endgame sequence.

In addition to the Game Center leaderboard, players can also share their score to Twitter, Facebook and earn Game Center achievements that provide for an extended amount of gameplay.

Development story

« Fly Kitty! was originally developed in one week as an attempt to clone Flappy Bird for training purposes and was not meant for public release. » said Erwan Bézier, Founder of Wanpoint.
As new ideas came to mind, it was then decided to add features and polish the look and feel so the game would be the first official release of Wanpoint.

Independent artist Maïa Zeidan greatly contributed to the beautiful graphics of the game with hand-painted background textures that give the game its unique atmosphere.

Please not another ad-bloated flappy clone!
